> Subscriptions are hereby solicited. The scope of this Map embraces an area of about Forty Five miles from North to South, and of about Sixty miles from East to West-that is to say the District of Sun-on whereof Nani-tao. is the departmental town. It is within the district of Sun-on that Rongkong and its dependencios stood prior to their caraion, and the whole Don't line for many miles adjagent is under the jurisdiction of the Mandarin at Nam-tao. The Map is the result of four years' labor, and > is made entirely from the personal observations of the author. The dangers, the difficulties, and the hard-hips which the work has involved, have been very great. The district is excessively mountainous and as occular demonstration had exclusively in all cases to be relied on, by reason of the worthlessness of native information, the fatigue attending travel has been no light matter. The villagers entertain the idea that their mounming contain auriferous deposits, and are very jealous of foreigners examining them. The consequence is that there is much difficulty in pracuring the services of guides, and still more ditionly in obtaining correct information on any point. In fact the idea above allused to prove a strong incentive to the conveyance of false information, and excites resistance to the progress f the traveller, besides creating great personal

Under these circumstances this Map has been produced, and It has been suggested to the auther that it is a pity the result of so much labor. danger, and difficulty, should in these days of progress, he concealed from the world. Science, Religion and Commerce are now allied in the vast work of the dissemination of knowledge and of Western Civiliantion, and it cannot be doubted that Geography is the pioneer of the movement. But in a local and a directly utilifatian point of view, the author is encouraged to believe that his work should not be placed as a candle under a bushel. This wealthy and most important Colony stands 'n the midet of the Sun-on District, and it seems to betoken a feeling in roar of the age, that the topography of the immediate neighbourhood should be a matter of perfect indifference. To the naturalist, the traveller, the sportsman, and the Missionnry, the information should be accept able, to say nothing of its political value. Besides, for pulice purposes in dealing with the all prevailing evil of pirney, when the subtlety of the hiandaria is considered, the author cannot doubt the value of his work to the British authorities. He therefore calls attention to his Map, and soligits the favor of subscriptions to enable him to

The political storms amid which this Princers passed her early years make the beginning of her life resemble to some extent the youth of her future husband. She was scarcely 10 years of age when, in 1702, the French fleet, comman-

On the other hand, it has been said that the shrowd Queen early saw the strong points in the character of the Duke of Orleans, and thought that, smid the perils which at the moment surrounded her family, it would be well to attach to their interests a man of his tact and experience. Whatever may have been her motives, there is no! cloubt us to the motives of the young people themselves. In 1814 the restoration of the House of Bourbon summoned the head of the younger branch of the family from this state of comparative scolusion and established him in his due position in France. In the month of September of this year the Duchess of Orleans arrived in her adopted country, but it was not long before the events of the Bundred Days oumpolled her to take refuge with her children England, whence she did not return to Paris till the commencement of the year 1817 From this time down to the Revolution of July her residence FTWO Specious granife GODOWNS at West was in France, where she attracted the egreem and love even of the enemies of the House of Or- | water frontage lears by the simple beauty of her life, her gentle niety, and her unwearying charity. In the must seclusion of Claremont she devoted herself to the task of soothing the regrets and cheering the heart of the King. In 1950 she received his last breath.

. The only public matter in which the Queen took a superficial area of about 19000 square feat. on interest during her residence in England was the proposed condition and fusion of the two I ranches of the House of Bourbon. The Legitimist partialities of the Queen induced her to indvocate, on certain conditions, a fusion which, it is well known, was successfully opposed by the Inchess of Orleans.
